The University of Queensland is a ‘Self-Insurer’ for Workers’ Compensation in Queensland

The University is self-insured for workers’ compensation and has established the Work Injury Management Section, within the Health, Safety and Wellness (HSW) Division, to manage all claims for workers’ compensation and rehabilitation.

The Work Injury Management (WIM) Section has been the provider of workers’ compensation and rehabilitation entitlements for University staff since April 2001. The benefits of the WIM Section providing services to University staff include:

- early provision of compensation payments and medical treatment to injured staff;
- best practice claims management and rehabilitation services for injured staff;
- effective communication with injured staff and managers regarding workers’ compensation matters, due to the University’s employment of specialist claims and rehabilitation personnel;
- strong incentives to prevent work-related injuries.

All workers’ compensation claims in Queensland are adjudicated under the legislative criteria of the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act 2003.

The following information is provided to assist University staff to report injuries and, if appropriate, apply for rehabilitation and compensation.

A summarised version of this procedure is seen in the Injury Reporting Procedure on page 8 of this booklet.

Workers’ Compensation

You must see a doctor if you are considering making a claim for workers’ compensation and you have suffered an injury or illness as a result of your employment with the University of Queensland. Please inform your doctor that all correspondence about work related injuries for University staff should be sent to the Work Injury Management Section at the University of Queensland.

If your doctor decides that it is appropriate to issue a workers’ compensation medical certificate in relation to the injury, the certificate should state the following information:

- Your specific injury or illness
- How the injury or illness is related to your work
- Pre-existing factors relevant to the diagnosis
- Whether you are fit to return to work, fit to return to suitable duties, or partially or totally unfit for work
- A start date and end date of any period of incapacity or treatment
- A date for the next medical review if applicable

If you decide to apply for Workers’ Compensation in Queensland what are the next steps?

If you attend a doctor in relation to your injury and are issued with a workers’ compensation medical certificate you may apply for workers’ compensation. To obtain an Application for Workers’ Compensation you should contact the Work Injury Management (WIM) Section on 3365 6022 or wimteam@uq.edu.au as soon as possible.

You should complete all information requested on the application form and forward it to the Work Injury Management Section promptly. It is preferable for the application form to be returned to the Work Injury Management Section within 48 hours of the injury occurrence so that a decision about your application can be made as early as possible. It should be noted, however, that the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act stipulates that you must lodge your Application for Workers’ Compensation within 6 months of your injury/illness being diagnosed. The Act also states that if your application is lodged more than 20 business days after your injury/illness arose, your entitlements may be affected.

If you are unable to complete all of the requested information on the application, contact should be made with the Work Injury Management Section. A decision about your entitlement to workers’ compensation cannot be made until all information is received by the Work Injury Management Section.
What happens after your application has been sent to the Work Injury Management Section?
The WIM Claims Manager reviews your application. The Claims Manager (Case Manager) may need to talk/write to your doctor, supervisor or manager and conduct any necessary investigation before a decision is made about your application.
Your suitability for a Rehabilitation Program will be assessed in consultation with the Claims Manager, Rehabilitation Adviser and your doctor.

How long will it take to make a decision about the application?
A decision will be made as soon as possible. Most claims are determined within three days of the completed claim being received by the Work Injury Management Section. You can assist to reduce the decision making time by providing clear and accurate details on the application. If your application is not complete, there may be a delay in the decision-making process. For example, if your medical certificate given by your doctor is unclear about your injury or illness, you may need to return to the doctor for more details.
Complex claims may take longer to decide. You will be kept informed of the progress of the application and notified as soon as a decision is made.

If you are off work, how do you get an income?
While a claim decision is pending, the staff member may elect to continue to be paid from their leave credits if they are available (i.e. personal, recreational or accessible long service leave). If the claim is accepted, leave taken to cover absence will be re-credited and the staff member will receive back pay for any time taken as leave without pay.
If the staff member does not have sufficient leave entitlements to cover the period of absence while a claim is pending, or if the claim is rejected, they will need to take leave without pay. The University will not continue to pay the staff member during the absence and staff members will need to source external financial support, if required.

What should you do with bills for medical treatment and other expenses?
You are responsible for the costs of medical treatment until your application for compensation is decided. If you have accounts and receipts at the time of lodging your application, they should be attached to the application. If your application for compensation and rehabilitation is accepted, you should send all subsequent accounts and receipts to the WIM Section and quote your claim reference number.

What should you do if the application is not accepted?
You will be given reasons in writing if your application is not accepted. You will also be advised of your rights of review.
You may submit an application for review of the decision to the Workers’ Compensation Regulator. If you are not satisfied with the outcome of the Workers’ Compensation Regulator review you can ask that your application be heard and decided by the Industrial Relations Commission.

What are you entitled to if the application is accepted?
Under the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act, you are entitled to all reasonable medical treatment that is appropriate in the circumstances, and compensation at 85% of your normal weekly earnings for the first 26 weeks incapacity (while supported by medical evidence), or an amount payable under the relevant industrial instrument. In this case, the University will pay your workers’ compensation through the normal payroll system.

THE UNIVERSITY OF QUEENSLAND • SELF-INSURANCE OF WORKERS’ COMPENSATION
Rehabilitation

Rehabilitation will assist in your safe return to work. Rehabilitation aims to maintain injured or ill staff members in suitable employment. When a staff member is off work, rehabilitation aims to return the staff member to suitable employment as early as possible in accordance with assessed needs.

A Rehabilitation Adviser will assess your suitability for a rehabilitation program and, if appropriate, will develop a rehabilitation program to meet your specific needs. The Rehabilitation Adviser will work with you, your treating doctor, supervisor/manager and other experts as appropriate to facilitate a safe and early return to suitable duties. A suitable duties program of gradually increasing hours and physical demands may be used to prepare you for returning to your normal or pre-injury duties. The Rehabilitation Adviser will also assess other needs such as work area modifications, treatment, and transport.

All injured/ill staff members are legally obliged to participate fully in their rehabilitation and suitable duties program, in cooperation with the treating doctor, supervisor/manager, and the rehabilitation adviser.

Further information regarding entitlements and responsibilities in relation to rehabilitation, can be found in the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Policy and Procedures.

What is the role of the Work Injury Management Section within the Health, Safety and Wellness Division at the University of Queensland?

The Work Injury Management (WIM) Section provides University staff with a professional, accessible and prompt Workers’ Compensation Service.

The WIM staff are accredited to administer the University’s licence for self-insurance of workers’ compensation under the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act.

The operations of the WIM Section are based on best practice research.

The Section also works with HSW in relation to injury prevention strategies and to assist in meeting the obligations under the Workplace Health and Safety Act.

General

You may also be required to provide factual statements and have your claim periodically reviewed and provide up-to-date medical evidence to support continuing payments of compensation. The University may require you to attend a medical examination with an independent doctor to assist in assessing ongoing liability or progression of rehabilitation. It is at this time that you should provide evidence to support your claim. By complying with this request quickly you will avoid unnecessary delays in making a decision on your application or ongoing liability to the University.

Non-Compliance with:

- a rehabilitation program, or
- with a request to attend a medical examination, or
- with a request to provide information requested by the University, without reasonable explanation may lead to compensation payments being suspended.

Pre-approval of surgery and hospital intervention in a private hospital for accepted claims is required.

Prior approval must also be obtained from the University for all elective hospitalisation in a private hospital.

The University is self-insured for workers’ compensation in Queensland and has established the Work Injury Management Section, within the Health, Safety and Wellness Division, to manage all claims for workers’ compensation and rehabilitation.

The following information is provided to assist University managers/supervisors to ensure that staff report injuries and, if appropriate, apply for workers’ compensation.

A summarised version of this procedure is seen in the Injury Reporting Procedure on page 8 of this booklet.

Workers’ Compensation

If there is a possibility that a staff member may make a claim for workers’ compensation, it is important that they are assessed by a doctor as soon as possible.

If the staff member needs to see a doctor in relation to their injury/illness, you should ensure that they advise the doctor that UQ is self-insured for workers’ compensation. It is important that the doctor is informed that all correspondence about work related injuries for University staff should be sent to the Work Injury Management Section at the University of Queensland.

Ensuring early completion and lodgement of the Application for Workers Compensation.

The staff member must complete all information in the relevant sections of the application and return the application to the Work Injury Management Section. It is preferable for the application form to be returned to that section within 48 hours of the injury occurrence so that a decision on claim liability can be made as early as possible. It should be noted however that the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act stipulates that the staff member must lodge their application for workers’ compensation within six months of their injury/illness being diagnosed. The Act also states that if their application is lodged more than 20 business days after their injury/illness arose, their entitlements may be affected.

If the staff member is unable to complete all of the requested information for a specific reason, contact should be made with Work Injury Management. A decision about their entitlement to workers’ compensation cannot be made until all information is received by the WIM Section.

Checking if the staff member is issued with a medical certificate.

You should check if the staff member is issued with a sick leave or workers’ compensation medical certificate. If a sick leave certificate is issued, it should be handled in accordance with local HR procedures for sick leave.

If a workers’ compensation medical certificate is issued, you or the staff member should contact the Work Injury Management (WIM) Section immediately. WIM will do the following:

- Provide the Application for Workers’ Compensation to the staff member and
- Assess/refer the matter to the Rehabilitation Adviser for assessment of rehabilitation needs.

Reporting the Injury - HSW requirement

The staff member should immediately report an injury/illness to you.

The staff member should complete an Injury, Illness and Incident Report available online on the University website. The Injury, Illness and Incident Reporting System can be accessed from the UQ Current Staff and Current Students pages (log into UQSafe).

This is not part of the Workers’ Compensation claim process.
Maintaining regular contact with injured employees

Managers and supervisors are responsible for keeping regular contact with injured employees who are off work. Regular contact is particularly important in ensuring a successful return to work and reducing the costs of injury to the organisational unit.

Medical Certificates

You should ensure that the staff member has a current medical certificate to cover absences from work or an updated medical certificate when commencing the suitable duties program.

Rehabilitation and Suitable Duties

University managers and supervisors have responsibilities under the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act to provide workplace rehabilitation and suitable duties for the earliest possible return to work of injured staff.

It is the responsibility of the Rehabilitation Adviser to provide guidance in the development of workplace rehabilitation and suitable duties programs. The Rehabilitation Adviser will contact the manager/supervisor about this matter soon after WIM have been notified of the injury/illness and received a claim if the matter is assessed as requiring rehabilitation.

Further information regarding work rehabilitation and suitable duties programs is detailed in the University’s Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Policy and Procedures.

Additional responsibilities of the manager/supervisor include:

- Early identification of workplace injury/illness
- Ensuring that an investigation has occurred in relation to the work event which caused or aggravated the injury/illness. (Note that a workers’ compensation investigation may also be conducted by, or on behalf of, the WIM Section.)
- Ensuring that preventative measures have been put in place to reduce the likelihood of the injury occurring again.

The managerial/supervisory responsibilities detailed in this booklet are critical strategies for successful rehabilitation and claims management outcomes and cost containment of claims.

Pre-approval of surgery and hospital intervention in a private hospital for accepted claims is required.

Prior approval must also be obtained from the University for all elective hospitalisation in a private hospital.

The University of Queensland is licensed to self-insure for workers’ compensation in Queensland and has established a Work Injury Management (WIM) Section to manage the University’s workers’ compensation and rehabilitation claims. Under the self-insurance scheme, University of Queensland workers with an accepted compensation claim will be entitled to medical expenses, wages and rehabilitation in accordance with the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act. The University WIM Section will ensure prompt wages payments to the patient, and medical expense payments to the treatment providers for accepted claims. This section of the booklet will provide you with important information about new procedures for ensuring that your patients’ entitlements are met and that your accounts are promptly paid under the University’s self-insurance scheme.

Medical Certificates for workers’ compensation

The current workers’ compensation medical certificate should be used for patients who are University of Queensland workers and who are considered to have a work-related injury/illness in accordance with the Workers’ Compensation and Rehabilitation Act. Work must be a significant contributing factor for a physical injury and the major significant contributing factor for a psychological/psychiatric illness/injury. If appropriate, a completed Medical Certificate should be given to the patient so that they can attach it to the University’s “Application for Workers’ Compensation” form when they are lodging a claim. The application forms are to be obtained by the patient from the Work Injury Management Section of the University of Queensland. Medical Certificates that are for the continuation of workers’ compensation benefits, should be given to the patient or promptly forwarded to the following postal address or email address:

Work Injury Management
The University of Queensland
St Lucia Q 4072
wimteam@uq.edu.au

Please note that medical certificates for University of Queensland workers should NOT be sent to WorkCover.

Payment for Medical Services

The University is liable for the cost of medical services for accepted compensation claims only. The medical service cost must be in relation to the injury/condition which is subject to the claim eg psychiatric/psychological treatment will not be paid for by the WIM Section where there is no certification and/or an accepted claim for the condition. Medical service accounts for accepted claims should be forwarded to the WIM Section’s postal or email address.

Prior approval must also be obtained from the University for all elective hospitalisation in a private hospital.

For further information regarding:
- Payments for services and reports
- Pre-approval of surgery or hospital intervention

Please contact the Work Injury Management Section on:

email: wimteam@uq.edu.au
or phone: (07) 3365 6022

Pre-approval of surgery and hospital intervention in a private hospital for accepted claims is required.

Payment will be in accordance with the Medical Table of Costs Schedule, as published by WorkCover Queensland. The Table of Costs Schedule is available on:
